BIOGRAPHY

Rob Malin is a private wealth and fiduciary attorney whose practice focuses on sophisticated estate planning, trust and estate administration, business succession, charitable planning, and wealth transfer taxation. He advises high-net-worth individuals and families, business owners, beneficiaries, fiduciaries, and financial institutions on complex planning and fiduciary matters.

A significant part of Rob's practice involves representing institutional fiduciaries, including banks and public trust companies. He advises trustees and trust officers on trust interpretation and administration, fiduciary duties and liability, discretionary distributions, complicated trust assets, beneficiary disputes, and other legal and regulatory issues affecting fiduciary relationships. He also counsels fiduciaries on risk management, fiduciary decision-making, and the resolution of complex trust and estate matters.

Before joining Martin, Tate, Morrow & Marston, P.C. in 2026, Rob served as Fiduciary Counsel and as manager for a regional bank's Nashville trust department, the firm's largest trust office. Based in Middle Tennessee, Rob serves clients throughout Tennessee and the Mid-South.
